

School aims to hone kids' 21st century skills and build growth mindset

A career counselling session organised for the students

The management of the GD Goenka Public School, Sarita Vihar says it aims to hone the 21st century skills and build a growth mindset in their students. "We are driven to train global citizens of tomorrow, who are skilled, interactive, engaged and life ready," it adds.

The management says it works out opportunities and strategies to relate head, hand and heart by building upon students' cognitive skills (head), action orientation (hand) and emotional skills (heart). "Cognitive development is focused on by incorporating courses to promote creative and critical thinking, peer education and opportunities at international level for collaborative skills, forums like Design for Change, World Scholar's Cup and Odyssey of the Mind have been brought in for students to practice decision making and problem solving," says the management.

"Skill development is focused upon not just by cross domain linkages in academics but also practical learning opportunities through digital exchange programs, learning through simulation in activity room and career counselling opportunities under Udaan," it adds. "Life skills are being built by involving students in community outreach programs in collaboration with Goonj, Cheshire Home and HelpAge India, apart from emotional counselling sessions," the management further says.
