NEW DELHI: G. D. Goenka Public School, Sarita Vihar, got the opportunity to host Padma Bhushan Uma Sharma as the esteemed guest and artist for the day to enrich students with the nuances of our traditional dance form Kathak.

Sharma through her talk and graceful performance enlightened the audience on the etiquettes of Kathak along with formal education.

Sharma's lecture demonstration kept everyone spell bound. She emphasised on the fact that education isn't just feeding the brain with literacy but one should give due importance to any form of art be it performing or visual.

The parents were also invited to be a part of this enriching session along with students of other schools.

Uma Sharma along with her disciples performed on various themes related to Indian mythology. She, along her team of dancers and three established instrumentalists, inspired and motivated the audience with her knowledge and performance towards this culturally rich dance form.

The programme was conducted in collaboration with Spicmacay, a non-political voluntary movement whose intention is to enrich the quality of formal education by increasing awareness about different aspects of Indian heritage and culture.
